Prefatory Note

The present list of references adheres, for the most part, to the plan and point of view of the Bibliographical Guide to English Studies of Tom Peete Cross, first published in 1919, which went through a series of revisions and had reached a tenth edition in 1951, the year of Professor Cross's death. Designed primarily as an introduction to the methods and materials of graduate study in English, the Guide quickly established itself as a valuable handbook for the practicing scholar in the humanities. Its purpose and organization are admirably described in the following sentences from the original Preface.

It is hoped . . . that the material may prove useful to other investigators who, bewildered by a seeming multiplicity or nonplused by an apparent absence of sources, labor under the delusion that the collection of bibliography is largely a matter of luck and that consequently it makes little difference where they begin. Special attention is therefore called to the Universal Bibliographies, the Bibliographies of Bibliographies, the indexes and classified lists of books and articles, and the bibliographies of dissertations. Students are urged to exhaust these general sources of information before following the desultory method frequently adopted even by otherwise respectable scholars. They are reminded that the most efficient investigator, by acquainting himself at the outset with previous collections of material on his subject, avoids the necessity of repeating operations already performed by others, and spares himself the possible mortification of discovering at length by accident that the matter under discussion has already been adequately treated and that therefore his labor has been in vain.

In the decade since 1951 the number of bibliographies and reference works in this field has increased to enormous, and even alarming, proportions. The utility of a reference guide for the student of English, or of the humanities generally, can perhaps best be measured by the degree to which it points out the essential sources which will enable the user to find his way quickly and surely to the more particular books and articles which he will need. In compiling a list of references it is fatally easy to add item upon item until the bibliography defeats its own purpose. Although the present work is inevitably larger than the 1951 edition of Cross's Bibliographical Guide, every effort has been made to restrict the material to the indispensable references in each field.

In the present edition a number of errors have been corrected, the material within each section has been brought up to date, and certain changes have been made in the organization which, it is hoped, will facilitate the use of the manual. For convenience, American literature, as before, has been kept separate from other literatures; and a new section, on language, has been added.

In the preparation of this manual I have had the generous assistance of colleagues, who have been willing to answer questions and make suggestions for its improvement. Thanks are also due to the staff of the University of Chicago Library, particularly to Miss Christine Reb, the Reference Librarian.

I think, sir, . . . you will find it a very good practice . . . always to verify your references.—MARTIN JOSEPH ROUTH (1755–1854).

The study of bibliography and of the scientific methods of using books should have an assured place in the university curriculum, . . . and . . . all who go forth into the world as graduates should have such an intelligent and practical knowledge of books as will aid them in their studies through life. . . . I do not mean that the university student should learn the contents of the most useful books; but I do mean that he should know of their existence, what they treat of, and what they will do for him. He should know what are the most important reference books. . . . If a question arises as to the existence, authorship, or subject of a book, an educated man should know the catalogues or bibliographies by which he can readily clear up the doubt. The words Watt, . . . Graesse, Quérard, . . . Hain, and Vapereau should not be unmeaning sounds to him. He should know the standard writers on a large variety of subjects. He should be familiar with the best method by which the original investigation of any topic may be carried on. . . . No person has any claim to be a scholar until he can conduct such an original investigation with ease and pleasure.—WILLIAM FREDERICK POOLE (1821–94).

This is my chief word of advice to every teacher. If you wish to make a text your own, if you wish to have any sort of right to give any opinions with regard to it, the least you can do is to verify your references. . . . I can assure you that this is the easiest and best way of learning to be a scholar, and therefore of qualifying yourself for being a teacher.—WALTER WILLIAM SKEAT (1835–1912).

Literature, Exclusive of Literature in America

An old standard work, published originally in 1749. It contains much valuable bibliographical evidence on early printed books. THOMAS DIBDIN's 4-volume edition (London, 1810-19) is considered less useful than the 1785-90 Herbert edition. An Index to Dibdin's edition was published by the Bibliographical Society in 1899.
